Political Platform text

From line 140 to 144:

The Federation of Young European Greens also believes that taxation can help support positive behaviours and discourage harmful behaviours. ~~Behavioural taxes such as a carbon tax, the taxation of meat products, the taxation of single-use plastic items, and the taxation of polluting cars, among others,~~ Behavioural taxes can be powerful tools to encourage change. Those taxes should be implemented fairly to avoid no examples needed. And clean cars don't exist, all cars are polluting. Some more, others less, but it's nuances. The kind of engine only accounts for a small part of a car's environmental impact. Others, more important ones are the resources needed for production, its manufacturing, the infrastructure cars need, etc. and the energy every single one of these fields consume.

Reason
