Insert from line 127 to 128:

to recognise and actively fight against the mechanisms that have resulted in the exclusion and silencing of racialised activists.

Anti-Semitism is not a problem of the past, and anti-Semitic riots and attacks worldwide show that anti-Semitism is a continuity in society as a whole. Anti-Semitism is not a prejudice, but a world-explaining conspiracy ideology that sees all evil in Jews and their destruction as the liberation from evil. Anti-Semitic attitudes can be found across all groups of society and shape the everyday lives of those affected - but anti-Semitism is not the problem of Jews, it concerns us all. Anti-Semitism can also target non-Jewish individuals or collectives as well that are perceived as Jewish in the anti-Semitic ideology. We must always fight anti-Semitism in all its forms. We also want to examine and criticise anti-Semitism in anti-racist contexts; a perspective critical of anti-Semitism must always be part of intersectionality
