R2 A5: Towards an agroecological Europe by 2030

Proposers DWARS, GroenLinkse Jongeren

Motion text

Insert from line 105 to 106:

- be integrated in all the measures taken, as well as mechanisms to ensure equity for ethnic minorities

.

- Develop local and regional programmes designating public land most accessible by communities, such as those in the heart of communities, for sustainable community projects and facilitating and stimulating the cultivation of such projects. These projects, such as community gardens, are to be decided by communities themselves through local forums, councils, or other local participation initiatives.

Reason

Focusing on the sustainable use of land and fostering of community, community projects can be an effective way to encourage sustainable local cultivation of produce by communities themselves. Complementing the previous clause on redistribution of land via land banks, designating municipal/state land in the hearts of communities for community projects such as community gardens would further encourage the principles of Farm to Fork and foster community-building.