- and social requirements of public purchase are central to reach this goal. The public sector has to take this leadership role for the transformations to come as soon as possible in the rest of economic and societal spheres.

Reason
An amendment to the title of the resolution from "An agroecological Europe by 2030" to "an agroecological Europe by 2035"is proposed in order to aligned the resolution with FYEG Executive Committee amendment proposal to the Political Platform to shift the climate neutrality target from 2030 to 2035 (more realistic with current possibilities and aligned with the goal of other movements such as Fridays For Future). This would make the resolution more reliable in terms of a true blueprint adjusted to the possible pace of the transformations and the climate neutrality objective with which an agroecological transition goes hand in hand. In addition, this change would imply to shift the year to reach full organic/local/fair food in public facilities from 2025 to 2027. In the end it is a way to make the transition at a sustainable pace, ensuring that social justice is ensured in the process and that changes are really transformative.
