Motion text

From line 48 to 57:

This is why The Federation of Young European Greens calls for:

- Green parties to position themselves more clearly on digital rights.
- Green parties to take the lead on the topic of digital rights, working to create a sustainable digital society.

~~This resolution is a call from the Federation of Young European Greens to seize the transversal topic of 'digital' in politics, a call to Green parties to position themselves (more clearly) as champions of a sustainable digitised society, and a call to claim the spotlight for an electorate who increasingly cares about the architecture of their digital personal, communal and political life. At a time where tech has become the biggest lobby sector in the EU by spending (ahead of pharma, fossil fuels, finance, and chemicals), let's think ahead about what the key digital priorities of the green youth for the short- and long-term represent, and their place in politics!~~

- National governments and European institutions to make sure the tech lobby is not able to control, influence, and negatively impact our digital rights, and thus to ensure the relevant laws and regulations are in the people's best interest.
- National governments and European institutions to consider developments and changes to digital spaces and technologies in how it would impact new legislation, as well as the modernisation of relevant outdated legislation or policies to address these spaces.
