Motion text

From line 38 to 42:

~~This externalisation affects nature, the Global South, and women, highlighting the care crisis and economic models prioritising the economic benefits of an elite over life. Degrowth opposes the cheapening of labour and resources and the racist ideologies supporting it, realising decolonization and a focus on human needs instead of capital accumulation for organising the economy.~~ This externalisation affects nature, the Global South, women and other groups in disadvantaged or deprived positions (for example by their sexuality, ethnicity, religion, race or other identities relevant to the applicable context), highlighting the care crisis and economic models prioritising the economic benefits of an elite over life

Reason

The original text does not mention other groups that may also be affected by externalization, and we do not see a scenario where underprivileged groups become privileged by the process that negatively affects them.
