R2 AM19: Climate Adaptation Is Justice: Care for Europe's Vulnerable Territories

Proposers DWARS

Motion text

From line 81 to 84:

- ~~Support for farmers through resilient crops, technical assistance, and local knowledge; meaningful involvement in adaptation strategies; programmes strengthening their role as socio-ecological custodians; and investment in environmental monitoring, restoration, and green jobs.~~
- Strengthened and accessible support for farmers and rural communities in their role as socio-ecological custodians through technical assistance, agroecological training, meaningful involvement in locally rooted adaptation strategies integrating traditional and local knowledge.

Reason

The current CAP (Common Agricultural Policy) already provides some sort of support for farmers. However, small farmers are not benefitting as much as large industrial farmers and have higher barries to entry. We also believe agroecology is the way for a climate-resilient Europe, and some more training in agroecological principles and practices, coupled with strengthened and accessible support, would not hurt.
